It was a early trip that we took in the morning from Tongaat to the Imfolozi gaming reserve camp. It was a long drive almost about 3 hours to get there, then we picked up some groceries. When we got there we packed our bags then head it out to our camping spots and prepared for the night because we were abit late. We ate kurry had nightshift.

The nightshift was tough but we somehow survived it. We cleaned up everything and packed up to head to our next campsite. It was very quite walking with our tour guys. We saw some amazing animals and swam in the lake. It was so fun to speak to other kids from the other boys town. We then prepared supper and watched the stars on our small cliff. We slept ~~in~~ in our sleeping bags. But moments later woke up for night shift.

It was lovely waking up to this nature vibe enjoying what is before me. I slept well yesterday nightshift it was really good we ate granola for breakfast and then went to go wash by the river side came back ate some crachers and stayed at that camp site and prepared supper while the night sky got dark I began reminiscing about my life and the end thought that I could do much better in school and that I believe in myself.

On wednesday things ~~took~~ took a slight turn because on the two previous days we were staying at this campsite so we packed our things and then headed out for the last day we had a long break and ate a whole bunch of biscuits. Through out the day it was hot but we arrived at a nice shallow cliff just above the lake and slept there we first bathed but did not go too far in because there were coocidiles in the water. The evening felt nice because it was my last nightshift so I slept well.

On Friday everyone was filled with joy because it was time to go home. It drizzled a bit so we put on our raincoats. It was a quick morning because we just packed our things and headed out to the quantum. We then ate at a restaurant and made our way to the other boys town campus. I felt really grateful for the opportunity boys town gave me. Thank you guys for a lovely trip to KZN the flight was amazing
